

There's A Wignat Among Us

Sorry chud, turns out violence is always the answer.

In the past couple days, the whole 'nothing ever happens' crowd took a big hit because it turns out that things do, in fact, happen. People who pay a slight amount of attention to world affairs, and especially those that have done so for a while, already know that happenings have been happening. At an increasing rate too! In 2014, no one would have thought that the Republican party would be a fairly hardline MAGA group. This was the party of Romney, not outsiders that want to make a change because change was the doctrine of the Left. Now look at us. In 2019, it became fairly commonplace to openly advocate militant anti-government sentiments during the BoogLARP movement. These violent sentiments have never left general RW discourse. In 2020, COVID would rapidly change the world. Its hard to describe for many newer guys that honestly weren't old enough to understand how different things are now. Throughout the Summer of Love, most major US cities were burning to the ground with establishment support. Hell, there was a faux anarchist state in downtown Seattle (long live CHAZ btw). In January of 2021, after months of the general Right bringing the validity of the election into question, a bunch of boomers broke through the doors of the Capital Building. At the time of writing this, it's been roughly a day since someone very narrowly failed to assassinate Trump (it was 150 meters dude, I could've hit that with a glock).

The worlds getting crazy. The outer edges of the political spectrum already predicted this of course, with Lefties calling it Late Stage Capitalism & Rightists sounding the trumpets that the Collapse is at hand. The only people that think that the current sociopolitical order is some immovable entity is normgroids, either the worst of the "Lemming" class or people that are ardent believers in NeoLiberalism. This is also requires a severe case of historical illiteracy, Rome didn't last so why would we? Regardless, the fact is clear that this is the late game of the modern world order. The multipolar world is at hand, Pax Americana ended in 2015 or 2022 at best. As an active duty Infantryman that trains for a South China Sea/Taiwan/Korea conflict daily, our chances of defeating China in a military sense are diminishing.

Obviously, for anyone who knows my politics, I don't see any of this as a bad thing. I'm decently prepared for this & can only see good things on the other side. Creative destruction & all that jazz. At this point, anyone not prepared for System Collapse, civil disorder, etc. is just a retard. If you fall into that camp, start stockpiling & networking, there's no reason not to anyway.

At some point in late 2019, a fellow AWD member told me that 2020 was gonna be our year & our decade. A kinda scoffed at this, assuming he was talking about some AWD led revolution spontaneously popping off out of nowhere. In retrospect, I understand what he meant.

Political Squabbblings

In the aftermath of Trumps failed attempt on his life, the usual suspects started pretending anyone reads their tweets & the eternal yapsesh commenced. As with most discourse in the past 10 years, it essentially amounted to center-right Conservatives showing Leftie tweets & headlines with classic captions as "wow imagine if the situation was reversed," or "so much for the tolerant left." To expect anything better from Conservatives is an exercise in futility. What I do expect better from are those further to the edge of the compass.

My only reaction to learning of the assassination attempt was "damn lol." It was in reply to a Discord message. It wasn't surprising in the least & I think most people expected this at some point. If not by the so-called Deep State than by some random tranny that took the whole Project 2025 controversy to heart. Apparently, some people were left rather stunned by the event & ensuing reactions. Something I've seen being lost on the moderate Right, but well understood on the Left, is that this whole ordeal is the best thing that could've possibly happened for Trump. The fact that the shooter was such a dysgenic cretin only adds to it. When the average Rightoid sees Trump get attacked, it gets internalized because Trump (unfortunately) is the political Avatar of White America right now. If they'll take shots at Trump, they'll take shots at you.

As an Accelerationist, I'm pretty upset that the down syndrome kid missed. In the words of someone on Xwitter, "America was a wind call away from civil war" I don't like to counter signal Trump when it comes to mainstream politics, but anything that puts the pressure on is welcomed.

That being said, let this event (more specifically the reactions to it) be a reminder that there's a Wignat in everyone. Every boomer, tranny, chud, etc. is more than willing to take up arms against what they see as evil. For some this happens earlier than others. NS dudes are more prone to this due to the Fascist view on war/violence & the fact that we're so far from what's right. But ultimately it's a human trait. Gone are the days where there might be a extremist or future mass shooter walking around among us. The powderkeg is at capacity, it just takes a spark.

I plan on doing a full article on this bit later, maybe over the weekend, but I've had an increasingly easy time convincing people in real life about things. Political violence, pro-White politics, even outright convincing people Hitler wasn't that bad. This is arguably more true for the women in my life than the men, funnily enough, though this may just be because I'm historically better with femoids. For context, the things I say on here or on iFunny are more or less the same as what I say irl. I can't get fired so I usually full send any opinion that won't put me in the crosshairs of counterintelligence. If possible, I recommend others do the same.

Again, the West is in its end game. Whether the future looks like balkanization, RaHoWa, etc. is up to whoever seizes the opportunities at hand. The time is rather quickly approaching where you're gonna have to stop using your tongue & start using your fangs. Behave Accordingly.

Hail Victory.

I'm geeking rn because my family is firmly in the establishment camp and any attempt I make at trying to sway them is met with hostility and threats. If I tried to arm myself in advance I would likely be disowned or even reported to the jannie state!
